

The Ayres Bulletin

More of the Salvage Sale

PERHAPS you are among those who feared to brave the crush of bargain-seekers, which present trade opportunities were responsible for. If so, here's good advice: Come down to-day. There'll be more than enough for hundreds more.

All the thousand pieces of muslin underwear held in reserve for the annual May sale were more or less damaged and could not be closed out in a day; the hundreds of pairs of shoes could not all be fitted; it was a practical impossibility to sell all those dozens and dozens of corsets, and, as for the children's wear, much still remains to tempt young mothers.

Nearly everything is in good condition, but nothing fresh enough to warrant its being put in with the regular stock. Prices? If anything, they will be cheaper than ever.

ONE LONELY PRISONER

GETS MUCH ATTENTION

Misleading Telegram Sends Captain and Patrol Wagon for One Harmless Man.

An air of bustle and preparation at the police station Saturday night followed the receipt of a telegram from State Prison Agent Link, who stated that he would arrive at 11:30 p. m., bringing with him some prisoners bound for the northern prison. He wished to stop in the city over night, and desired to place his men in jail until Sunday or Monday morning.

The patrol wagon was taken to the depot, and, anticipating several prisoners, Captain Boylan was at the station to see that all was well. The train was thirty minutes late. When it finally reached the city the agent alighted with one lone prisoner, a thin, harmless-looking man, who was loaded into the wagon with his several escorts and taken to the county jail.

Mr. Link will leave for Michigan City this morning, taking with him an additional charge, Ed Wilson, of this city, who has been held in the county jail since he was brought in Saturday night was Reuben Baker, who also violated his parole, and is being returned to the penitentiary to serve the remainder of his sentence. His second downfall was caused by too much attention to liquor.

"Too much booze," he said, "and it means eight years more for me."

"BIKE" MEN RIDE MILES

TO ARREST A CABMAN

Little Boy Run Down by His Cab Has Broken Leg and Wounds on the Head.

One of the longest runs ever made by two bikemen on the city police force was made by Bicyclemen Lowe and Moffatt Saturday night. The two men were called to Thirty-fourth and Illinois streets, where it was reported an accident had taken place. When the men arrived there they found that George Harris, a four-year-old boy living at Thirty-fourth street and Graceland avenue, had been run over by a cab. The little fellow was in bed with a broken leg and several wounds on his head. Straightening up in bed he said to the officers, "I want a man that can run over me." Bicycleman Lowe said that he would try his best. After close investigation the officers learned that the cab that had run over young Harris was driven by Charlie Pedro, living at 171 River avenue, West Indianapolis. Without stopping the officers rode to that address and arrested Pedro for assault and battery. His trial will come up in Police Court this morning.

OLD BRICKS WILL BUILD MEMORIAL TO FIRST HOME

Debris from Cradle of Odd Fellowship, Burned in Baltimore Fire, Selling Fast.

PLAN IS UNIQUE ONE

To-morrow is the anniversary of the birth of American Odd Fellowship, and the members of this great fraternity will celebrate the day in a variety of ways all over this country and in twenty-three foreign countries. Just eighty-five years ago to-morrow in the old Seven Stars in Baltimore started the organization which has since grown into such immense proportions as to now number 1,250,000 members.

A prominent feature of the addresses delivered to-morrow in different parts of the world will be the telling of the story of how the Seven Stars, the birthplace of this great order, was destroyed in the great Baltimore fire of Feb. 8, 1901. The hearts of all Odd Fellows will be made glad when they learn through the press to-day for the first time that a committee from the mother lodge of the order, Washington, D. C., has secured the bricks from the old Seven Stars. The property is now owned by Charles J. Bonaparte.

This committee has purchased the whole bricks from the debris of the original Seven Stars as souvenirs to be sent to the lodges throughout the country, or as many as can be supplied, that will unite in contributing to a fund which has been started to erect a memorial building for the old mother lodge. This will take the place of the old Seven Stars in the heart of the city of Baltimore. The number of bricks is limited, as most of them crumbled in the awful heat of the fire.

While this is true, the committee has arranged so that individual members of the order who contribute as much as $5 will be given a souvenir of the bricks, and a printed in colors, with a picture of the Seven Stars, will be given with each souvenir.

John B. Goodwin, of Atlanta, Ga., the grand scribe, and J. Frank Grant, the grand secretary of the order, together with more high officials, have already contributed to the memorial fund, the receipts having already reached $100. Many lodges in different parts of the country have sent contributions.

The committee has made arrangements with Mr. Elvin J. Curry, of Baltimore, the assistant grand secretary of the order, by which they get the proceeds of the sale of the Red Blood of Odd Fellowship. This book has lately been published by Mr. Curry, and has been a great success. It is a book among the officers and members of the whole order. It has already been sold in six foreign countries, and in every State, Territory and Canadian province in the world. Odd Fellows believe that it will aid greatly to the undertaking of the committee. In fact, the largest amount that has been received from contributors thus far is from the sale of this book.

Little Stories

Two staid matrons of the North Side put their heads together during the past week and devised a small joke on their husbands, taking advantage of the fact that one had been a schoolmate of Helen Bertram, who was a grand, and that the other was a youthful friend of the actress. The respective husbands were informed that Miss Bertram had been invited to dinner at the home of the actress, and the aforesaid early friendship, and had accepted; that the dinner for five had been ordered for the evening of the 25th, and the households were expected to do was to put on dress suits, foot the bills and leave for the actress's home.

Both husbands demurred, but the wives were obstinate, and as husbands are wont to do, they decided to let the matter go. A note at his plate, purporting to come from Miss Bertram, but in reality written by the wife of one of the husbands, kept the engagement, but stating that the first and last number that night would be sung for him. Whether they have yet learned that the whole thing was a put-up job for a family party at the club and at the theater, and that the actress had been invited to the club and at the theater, anyway, and if the husbands didn't it was their duty to have done so.

The trio came into an out-bound Brightwood on a starling fashion. Two of the three carried sacks which they regarded with jealous eyes. The third carried a basket from the ends of which protruded a miscellaneous collection of radishes, new onions and parsnips. The third was the man. He had a bandanna handkerchief of the style worn during the war of the rebellion tied closely around his waist and he had a small bag slung over his shoulder. He smiled benignly on the little woman and the half-grown boy who had preceded him, and this seemed to be a signal for lunch, as all three at that time inspected the contents of their packages. The man dug deep in the recesses of his bag and drew forth three buns, which from their looks did not seem to be fresh from a baker's oven. He handed one to each of his companions and these the latter greedily munched during the continuation of the journey. Some of the passengers noticed that the man who had been so kind as to give out the car was "I wish I had a drink of water."

Snare Drum, but No Money.

Among the many loiterers who were caught in the police drag net yesterday were two negroes from Nashville, Tenn.—James Williams and Manuel White. They had no money, but rejoiced in the possession of a snare drum. In the absence of the regulation sticks, they used the necessary noise producers from a piece of pine and were much concerned when the outfit was taken from them as they passed behind the bars.

MADE CARRIAGES WHERE CLAYPOOL HOTEL STANDS

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Mull, Many Years Residents of Indianapolis, Married Here in 1854.

HAVE GOLDEN WEDDING

Two of the city's oldest inhabitants, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Mull, of 340 North West street, are preparing to celebrate their golden anniversary, which will occur on Tuesday, May 3. This venerable couple have lived in Indianapolis nearly all of their lives, and in their present home for seventeen years.

Mr. Mull delights in telling of his experiences between persistent puns on his corn-cob pipe. He was born in eastern Tennessee, July 16, 1823. With his father he came to Morgan county, Indiana, at the age of seven. He stayed there "for one crop" and then moved to the little village of Belleville. He first came to the city in 1844 and engaged in the carriage business with the late Gastons on the spot where the Claypool Hotel now stands. His "No. Mean CHY" of that time consisted of a struggling town of about 3,000 inhabitants. Charles Mayer's general store was the business center of the town. It was located in its present place, but in a small frame building about a foot lower than the sidewalk.

Mr. Mull left the city in 1846 for a trip through the West, finally drifting down the Mississippi river to New Orleans, where he enlisted as an artificer in the Mexican war. On the voyage across the Gulf of Mexico he was shipwrecked on the Island of Padre and remained there for eleven days before he was rescued. In 1848 he came back to Indianapolis and obtained a position as mail agent on the old Secor, now the Big Four. This city was then its western terminus. After three years' work in this line he drifted into his old carriage-making trade and has kept it up ever since. Now at the age of eighty-one, he still piles his trade and has kept it up ever since. Now, day.

Mrs. Mull, formerly Janette Laing, was born in the city in 1828. She was here all her life, spending her girlhood where the Masonic Temple now stands. She married in 1846 and lived on the ground now occupied by Smith's restaurant on North Illinois street. The honeymoon consisted in a railroad trip to Cincinnati, a great thing in that day. The recent flood has reminded her of the great flood of 1847, when all Springfield was washed out and when she escaped with great difficulty.

Both Mr. Mull and his wife are in excellent health, and from their appearance no one would imagine their age. Mr. Mull is the oldest carriage maker in the State, both in years and length of service.

AMATEUR DRAMA GIVEN BY COUNCIL OF Y. M. I.

First Social Event of the Council Is Applauded by a Large Audience.

Sherman Council, No. 557, Y. M. I., gave a delightful three-act society drama entitled "Still Waters Run Deep," at St. Joseph's Hall on East North street last night. This is the first social event given by this council, which was organized about three years ago through the efforts of the Rev. James B. Delany. The play was very well given and the large audience present applauded every feature to the end.

Those participating were Miss Clara Ensey, Miss Stella Vondessar, Mr. Robert Peale, Mr. Clarence Sweeney, Mr. John Sullivan, Mr. John Brady, Mr. Frank Fitzgerald and Mr. John Deery. The play was given under the management of Mr. Robert F. Peale.

AMBULANCE DRIVER BECOMES BRAKEMAN

Harry McDonald, City Dispensary Employee, Resigns After Four Years' Service.

Harry McDonald, who for four years has been day driver of the City Dispensary ambulance, has resigned his position and will become a Big Four brakeman. He has been succeeded by Bert Marshall, who has been on night duty at the dispensary.

McDonald, during his four years of faithful service, has had many thrilling experiences. During the Purdue wreck he was promoted from driver to the injured and was given a trip to and from the scene of the disaster, carrying sufferers to the hospital where their needs could be attended to.

He was also called to the scene of the North Indianapolis station, where a man was killed by a train. The injured man was in a surgeon's hands at the City Hospital within forty-five minutes.

DIVISION OF SALARY CAUSES FAMILY ROW

George W. Falkner, living on West Washington street, had trouble with his wife because he refused to turn over all of his earnings to her. The difficulty culminated in his arrest on a charge of drawing deadly weapons.

"I didn't have nothing but a penknife," said Falkner, "and I don't threaten her with it. A week ago I gave my wife $13 and kept 70 cents for myself. On Friday she told me to give her the balance of the week I gave her $3.70 and kept 40 cents. And that's what the trouble was about."

WORKS TO GIVE POWERS LAST CHANCE FOR LIFE

Friend of Condemned Kentuckian Raising Funds for Appeal to Supreme Court.

IS HIS FINAL HOPE

James H. Moore, of Louisville, Ky., a close friend of Caleb Powers, who has been sentenced by two courts to be hanged and is preparing to make his last stand for life, arrived in Indianapolis yesterday to attend the Republican state convention and to solicit funds for the condemned man in the event that the state courts of Kentucky refuse him a new trial. Powers' motion for a new trial is now in the hands of the State Court of Appeals, from which little hope is entertained, as the court is composed of five Democrats and two Republicans.

In case the motion for a new trial is overruled Powers hopes to carry his trial to the Supreme Court of the United States. To this end his friends are rallying to his aid and are working night and day to raise the sum of at least $50,000, which will be necessary to carry his case to the higher courts and employ John G. Carlisle, Senator W. M. Lindsay and former Governor Black, of New York, to defend him. Mr. Moore, who is probably one of Caleb Powers' best friends, has been touring the country raising money for the fund. He is armed with a great mass of papers from eminent men who have given not only money, but strong letters in behalf of Powers.

Mr. Moore will receive subscriptions at the Claypool Hotel.

According to Mr. Moore, people all over the country are coming to the relief of Caleb Powers. If the time should come when the case is carried to the Supreme Court, Mr. Moore predicts there will be more than 100,000 signatures to the petition to Governor Beckham, signed by the Governor of each State in the Union, asking that Powers be pardoned. He is still in jail at Louisville.

Twenty are Confirmed.

At the morning service at Christ Church yesterday Bishop Francis confirmed a class of twenty men and women. It had been announced that a class of deaf mutes was to be confirmed at the morning service, but owing to a misunderstanding as to hours the candidates for confirmation did not reach the church. The mutes will be confirmed later. After the ceremony of confirmation Bishop Francis spoke of the Christian Life as an Evidence of Christianity.
